Max Planck Institute for Developmental Biology: Laboratory Technician (m/f/d)

One Laboratory Technician position is available in the Max Planck Research Group on Mutualisms. The envisioned start date is November 1st.

Split evenly between research and coordination, the duties of the position will range from animal rearing and basic molecular approaches, to ordering and maintaining laboratory stocks and supplies. The ideal candidate will apply their prior experience in the laboratory to plan, conduct and support research activities on animal-microbe interactions. Experience with histology, microscopy and bioinformatics are a plus. A successfully completed training as BTA or a comparable qualification in biology, microbiology, zoology or a closely related field is required. Prior research experience is essential, preferably including animal care (which is a core function of this job appointment). Previous experience and work records should demonstrate a strong commitment to research, thoroughness, and organizational ability.

Applications should contain the following:

- 1) Cover letter, including a summary of research experience and career goals
- 2) Curriculum vitae
- 3) Contact information for one professional reference (email, telephone, and institutional address)

Please submit your application on our job portal under the following link:

<https://jobs.tue.mpg.de/jobs/69>

Applications must be received by October 10th, 2020 for full consideration.

The Max Planck Society is committed to increasing the number of individuals with disabilities in its workforce and therefore encourages applications from such qualified individuals. Compensation and benefits are based on TVöD regulations. Following a six-week evaluation period, the initial appointment will be for two years, with the possibility for renewal. For questions about this position, please email Hassan Salem (hassan.salem@tuebingen.mpg.de). Additional information can be found on the group's website.
